BayCare Promotes Leaders to Expanded Roles

BayCare Health System announced the promotion of three senior executives to assume more responsibility within the not-for-profit health care organization. The promotions are the first under new CEO and President Stephanie Conners.

Two veteran operations leaders, Lou Galdieri and Kimberly Guy, have been named Co-Chief Operating Officers for the system. Galdieri, former president of Morton Plant Hospital in Clearwater, had most recently been senior vice president and market leader for Pinellas County West Pasco, and Winter Haven. Guy, former president of St. Joseph's Hospital in Tampa, had been senior vice president and market leader for Hillsborough, East Pasco and Bartow. The two will work collaboratively to lead the operations, strategic planning and clinical integration of BayCare's 15 hospitals, dozens of ambulatory care locations and behavioral health services.

The two will work collaboratively to lead the operations, strategic planning and clinical integration of BayCare's 15 hospitals, dozens of ambulatory care locations and behavioral health services.

In addition, Keri Eisenbeis, who was vice president for Government and Community Relations, has been promoted to senior vice president of Corporate Relations and also now serves as Chief of Staff for Conners, who became BayCare's fourth CEO on Nov. 28. Eisenbeis, in her new role, provides strategic support for Conners while also leading BayCare's external affairs with a focus on government relations, strategic communications, community benefit and broader community partnerships.

"As I visited more than 50 BayCare facilities in my first 45 days, I experienced first-hand the impact our extraordinary team has on all we serve," said Conners. "My goal in promoting these established leaders is to elevate their influence as we work together to make BayCare the best place to receive care, the best place to provide care and the best place to work."

Source: BayCare Health System

Published on : Fri, 9 Dec 2022