
Nasrien E. Ibrahim is the New Heart Failure & Transplant Cardiologist at Brigham & Women's Hospital

Nasrien E. Ibrahim. has assumed a prominent new role as a Heart Failure and Transplant Cardiologist at Brigham and Women's Hospital, marking a significant advancement in cardiology. Dr Nasrien is widely recognised for her expertise in severe heart failure and transplantation, groundbreaking research contributions, and her commitment to supporting healthcare equity.

Dr Nasrien is dedicated to improving adherence to guideline-directed therapies for heart failure patients and expanding access to heart transplants for historically marginalised communities. She has a notable publication record in prestigious journals and serves as an Associate Editor for the Journal of the American College of Cardiology: Heart Failure.

She is a Fellow of the American College of Cardiology, the American Heart Association, and the Heart Failure Society of America. She is a strong advocate for addressing healthcare inequalities, emphasising the need of eliminating structural imbalances in medicine. The appointment of Dr Nasrien aims to bring about beneficial improvements and developments in the field of cardiology.

Published on : Thu, 7 Sep 2023