
New Resuscitation Technique Offers Hope for Cardiac Arrest

The new technique involves a round of 200 chest compressions before a defibrillator shock and is significantly more successful than standard approaches. This new method increases blood flow when the heart stops pumping blood.

Published on : Tue, 18 Mar 2008