Commenting on the launch of the 2020 edition, Zenab Husain, Production Director of the PXECongress underscored “an uphill battle” the industry is having to pioneer the future of patient engagement, satisfaction, loyalty and benchmarking. “Underpinning the over-arching goal to unpack the complexities of the patient journey, explore solutions to reduce friction and embrace collaboration opportunities between the touch points, the Patient Experience Excellence Congress returns this year with exciting new content and a fresh new line-up of top global and regional trendsetters,” she said adding that experience leaders were in a unique vantage point to share their insights.

In the context of the implementation of Ada'a – an internationally recognised performance measurements model, a congress speaker Dr Mohammed Khaled Abdulaali, Assistant Deputy Minister for Hospital Services – Ministry of Health Saudi Arabia commented, “Patient expectations are ever-increasing and their opportunity to understand their condition, due to exposure to the internet, means that they become more informed and more demanding of the healthcare system and its clinicians. As we make this transformation and address these challenges, it is important that we have a positive impact on health outcomes. People must see and feel the benefit of the changes, we are making.”

Dr Ghassan Abbass, Assistant Vice President for Clinical Excellence at Riyadh Second Health Cluster, expanded on the topic of caregiver burnout as a global healthcare epidemic, saying, “Caregiver wellbeing should be recognised as key aspect of the organisation's strategy. It does not happen by accident, nor is it achieved through short term isolated efforts but rather should be part of every strategic plan, with clear ownership, and dedicated resources. The Congress will offer a great opportunity to find out the new trends and learn from the best in the field.”

According to Dr Monalisa Watfa, Chief Experience Officer in Saudi German Hospitals, patient experience professionals often need to find new solutions for old problems. “Patient feedback and concerns are very similar across hospitals and across geographical zones. This means that opportunities to learn from other organisations and sectors abound. There are many untapped opportunities for us to share knowledge, learn from each other, and in turn, revolutionize the way we care for our patients,” she said.
